

Amphibians and reptiles of Yellowstone National Park

Yellowstone National Park is home to four amphibian species and seven species of reptiles. None of the species are endangered or threatened. The glacial nature of and dry conditions in Yellowstone are likely responsible for the relatively low number of amphibian and reptile species in Yellowstone.^{[1][2]}

See also

- Animals of Yellowstone

Further reading

- Stebbins, Robert C. (1954). Amphibian and Reptiles of Western North America. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company.
- Turner, Frederick B. (1955). Reptiles and Amphibians of Yellowstone Park. Yellowstone National Park, WY: Yellowstone Library and Museum Association.
- Koch, E. D.; Petersen, C.R. (1995). Amphibians & Reptiles of Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks (<https://archive.org/details/amphibiansreptil00koch>). Salt Lake City, UT: University of Utah Press. ISBN 0-87480-472-8.

Boreal Toad

References

1. "Yellowstone's Amphibians" (<http://www.nps.gov/yell/naturescience/amphibians.htm>). Yellowstone National Park, National Park Service. Archived (<https://web.archive.org/web/20100203031503/http://www.nps.gov/yell/naturescience/amphibians.htm>) from the original on February 3, 2010. Retrieved February 1, 2010.
2. "Yellowstone's Reptiles" (<http://www.nps.gov/yell/naturescience/reptiles.htm>). Yellowstone National Park, National Park Service. Archived (<https://web.archive.org/web/20100128055740/http://www.nps.gov/yell/naturescience/reptiles.htm>) from the original on January 28, 2010. Retrieved February 10, 2010.